NEWS SUMMARY.

A Methodist Minister, on his way from Virginia to Council Bluffs, was made a victim of the ball game" at Cincinnati, the other day. The Gazette says that the Virginia clergyman accepted an invitation to take a walk from a very well dressed and affable stranger, and as they strolled they fell in with a third person, who opened and exhibited a patent safe, and offered to bet that there was a piece of paper in it. The elergyman refused to bet, as it was against his principles, although he was certain there was no paper inside. Thereupon the newly-found friend of the Divine said he would bet if the Minister would lend him some money, taking therefor a check on New York for $775. The clergyman counted out all the money he had-$383-and the "safe" man seized it and ran. The clergyman gave the alarm, but his friend who had walked with him told him not to make any noise, and pulling out a pi-tol started after the "safe" man, assuring the Minister that he would either recover his money or kill the rascal who grabbed it. Of course the Virginia clergyman saw no more of either of the fellows. The minister expresses less regret at the loss of his money than lears that his friends in Virginia would learn what's fool he had made of himself.

An English paper says: One of the occupants of a linge bedroom in an American hotel shook the room with his snoring. Another went up to his bedside, and shook him. "Are you aware, sir, that you are talking in your sleep, and betraying all the secrets of the Central Alligator Bank? We have already learned that you whisper closed the sentence, and the chairman of the Central Alligator slept no more.

THE Richmond Whig says that the frauduent transactions of Gish, the forger, are known to amount to over $300,000. Such was the insinunting character of the scamp, and his success in gaining the confidence of people, that men who for six months were aware of his transactions, their own names having been forged, refrained from exposing him on account of personal feelings and delicacy! They even suffered themselves to be sued and judgments obtained upon forged paper. The shrewest did not escape his wiles, and quite a number of persons have been ruined by their confidence in him.

A little printing-press has been sent from Pars to Constantinople. It is to find its place in the harem of Ribardy Effendi, and will be used exclusively for the benefit of the Turkisa ladies .-The wife of Ribardy Effendi is said to be well versed in the French and English bells-lettres, and intends to publish a collection of the best occidental novels in a Turkish translation. The enterprising lady is busy turbaning Mr. Thackerny's "Newcomes."

One hundred students of the Columbia (S. C.) College have been suspended for having besmeared the recitation room with tar and filth. The faculty had refused to suspend exercises on Thanksgiving day, hence the insubordina-

Supremacy of Crinoline.

Let nobody turn over this page impatiently alarmed at the prospect of another distribe against crinoline. I, for one, am not going to exhibit myself in the character of a writer who vainly opposes one of the existing institutions of the country. The press, the pulpit, and the stage, have been in the habit of considering themselves as three very powerful levers, capable of being used with terrible effect on the in-ert material of society. All three have tried to jerk that flourishing foreign plant, crinoline, out of English earth, and have failed to stir so much as a single root of it. All three have run full tilt against the women of England, and have not moved them an inch. Talk of the power of the press!-what is it compared with the pow er of the French milliner! The press has tried to abridge the woman's petticoats, and has ut-terly failed in the attempt. When the right time comes, a French milliner will abridge them at a week's notice. The pulpit preac es, the stage ridicules; and each woman of the congregation or audience sits imperturbable in the middle of her balloon, and lets the serious words or the comic words go in at one ear and come out at the other, precisely as if they were spoken in an unknown tongue. Nothing so de-plorably deteriorating for the reputation of the press, the pulpit and the stage has ever happened as the utter failure of their crasade against crinoline. My present object in writing is likely, I think, to be popular-at least with the ladies. I do not want to put down crinoline of only want to make room for it. Personally, I rather like it-I do, indeed, though I am a man. The fact is, I am a thoroughly disciplined husband and father; and I know the value of it. The only defect in my eldest daughter's otherwise perfect form lies in her feet and ankles. She is married, so I don't mind mentioning that they are decidedly large and clumsy. Without crinoline they would be seen; with crinoline (think of that scotting oung men!) nobody has the slightest suspi cion of them.

My wife-I implore the readers not to tell ber that I ever observed it—used to waddle be-fore the invention of crinoline. Now how she swims voluptuously, and knocks down all the light articles of furniture, whenever she crosses the room, in a manner which, but for the expense of repairs, would be perfectly charming. One of my other single daughters used to be sadly thin, poor girl. Oh, how plump she is now! Oh, my marriageable young men, how amazingly plump she is now! Long life to the monarchy of crinoline! Every mother in this country who has daughters to marry, and who is not quite so sure of their unaided personal at-tractions as she might wish to be, echoes that oyal cry, I am sure, from the bottom of her affectionate heart. And the press actually thinks it can shake our devotion to Quen Petticoat!—
The press, ladies? Pooh! Pooh!—[Dickens] Honschold Words.
